

SOWMYA SURYANARAYAN

Ms. Sowmya Suryanarayan, an illustrious alumna of St. Joseph's College, had always harbored a fervent desire to make a difference in the world. Her journey from the hallowed halls of her alma mater to being listed among Forbes India's self-made women in 2024 was nothing short of extraordinary.

As a student, Sowmya was known for her insatiable curiosity and unwavering determination. She excelled academically, but her true passion lay in addressing social and environmental challenges facing her country. Inspired by the teachings of her college, which emphasized the importance of service to society, Sowmya embarked on a mission to create meaningful change.

After completing her education, Sowmya ventured into the world of finance, recognizing it as a powerful tool for driving social impact. She joined Aavishkaar Capital, a pioneering firm dedicated to investing in businesses that generate both financial returns and positive social and environmental outcomes. Sowmya's expertise and passion for sustainable development quickly propelled her through the ranks.

In her role as the Director of Impact and ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) at Aavishkaar Capital, Sowmya wielded her influence to steer investments towards enterprises that prioritized sustainability and social responsibility. She meticulously evaluated potential ventures, ensuring they aligned with Aavishkaar's mission of creating a more equitable and inclusive society.

Sowmya's dedication did not go unnoticed. Forbes India recognized her as one of the country's self-made women, lauding her for her pioneering work in the field of impact investing. Yet, for Sowmya, the accolades were secondary to the impact she was able to create.

Through her leadership and unwavering commitment, Sowmya Suryanarayan became a beacon of hope for aspiring entrepreneurs and changemakers alike. Her story served as a testament to the transformative power of education, determination, and a relentless pursuit of one's passions. And as she continued to chart new frontiers in the world of impact investing, Sowmya remained steadfast in her belief that with dedication and vision, anything was possible.